MADDENED BOAR ATTACKS HORSES

Infuriated Animal Punctured One
Horse in the Abdomen With His Tusks.

TWO OTHERS ARE WOUNDED

Happy Family Had a "Fallin' Out"
And the Boar Got Busy With His Mouth Sword.

A near-deadly conflict between an infuriated boar and three fine horses belonging to Bruce Graham, the trainer, breeder and driver of blooded horses, took place at a late hour Friday night which resulted in injuries to the trio of horses, one of which was probably fatally wounded.

The animal had been left in the field with the grazing horses and heretofore they were as one happy family. Some time during the night a battle took place and the next morning Mr. Graham was surprised to find one of his most valued horses bleeding profusely from the wounds inflicted by the boar's tusks. One horse received a long gash just below the knee; another sustained an ugly wound just above the hock on its left hind leg. The third animal was found in a serious condition. The maddened boar had inflicted a puncture in the abdomen, spilling a greater portion of its intestines. Dr. Davis, the veterinary, cast the horse, placed it under the influence of chloroform, replaced the bowels and took a number of stitches in the abdominal wall. At present, all the horses bid fair to recover.

NEWMAN CUT UP IN FIGHT SUNDAY

Received Four Wounds in Face After Quarrel--Whiskey Played a Part.

ANOTHER FIGHT REPORTED

John Newman received four cuts over his right eye in a fight south of this city Sunday morning about 11 o'clock. According to Newman's story, "Sump" Levi, of Jersey City inflicted the wounds after the two had quarreled. It is said that "booze" played a prominent part in the trouble. Another version throws the trouble on another affair that is said to have occurred in a Second street saloon Saturday night, in which Levi was slightly worsted. Dr. W. S. Coleman took six stitches to close up the wounds on Newman's head.

MAN OF THE HOUR WILL BE WATSON

CROWD GOING TO COLUMBUS

Special Watson Train Will Stop at
Main Street on its Return
Tomorrow Night.

"It will be loaded down with Watson men, good bye, old Marshall, good bye." Five hundred or more are expected to go to Columbus tomorrow night on the Watson Special, and what a glorious night it will be. It is something to come from the town--no mean town--that is to furnish the next governor of Indiana, and not a man, woman or child, that marches down the paved streets of Columbus tomorrow night, but what will experience a feeling of pride and joy, and feel that it is good to be there.

Special cars will be reserved for the ladies, and quite a coterie, including Mrs. James E. Watson, wife of "the man of the hour," will be aboard. The cars will be heated and the Pennsylvania has promised to send out one of their best trains. The train leaves here at 6:15 o'clock and many workmen have made arrangements to quit at five o'clock in order to be on hand in plenty of time. Returning the special will leave Columbus at 10:15, and is due in Rushville at 11:15 o'clock. For the benefit of those who live in the northern part of the city, County Chairman Frazee has made arrangements to have the train make an extra stop at the Main street crossing on its return.

The Watson club and as many others as desire, will assemble in the court house square at five-thirty o'clock and march to the depot, accompanied by a brass band and the local and Carthage drum corps. It is requested of everybody going that they form in line on reaching Columbus and march through the streets to the place of the speaking. Won't it be a glorious moment for "Our Own Jim" when he hears that shouting and howling host come marching down the street, and then experience that greatest thrill of all emotions, being honored by his own people; to look down into a mass of faces--neighbors and friends from home.

Special provisions have been made to entertain all the old soldiers and seats will be reserved for them on the stage. At Shelbyville and other "way" points the Rushville crowd will be augmented by Watson followers.

A report was current yesterday that tickets would be circulated free. This is a mistake and was probably made maliciously by our envious friends. However, thanks to this Republican prosperity, hundreds will not find it hard to raise 84 cents which will pay all their expenses there and back. One look into "Our Own Jim's" smiling face will be worth ten times that amount.

A delegation from Connersville, accompanied by a drum corps will come over and go down on the special.

JAPANESE GIRL A GUEST HERE

A Darling of the Gods of the Flowery Kingdom, Royally Entertained Here.

MET FORMER TOKIO FRIEND

Miss Ishihara Tells of Amusing
Audience With President Roosevelt.

A daughter of the flowerly kingdom and a veritable darling of the gods was a guest in Rushville yesterday, attracted no end of attention and made many, many friends before the sun set and she took her leave. The little lady with the catchy squint in her eye, an olive complexion and abbreviated feet, was Miss Kiku Ishihara, who is now a student in a Cincinnati school. She is the only Jap girl in all Cincinnati, but does not get lonesome as she has many friends among the Germans and the "white people" there.

Miss Ishihara was the guest of Miss Winfred Muir in West Third street Sunday and she spoke at the Union Bible school yesterday afternoon and again at St. Paul's M. E. church last night where she made an appeal for Americans to send money and missionaries to Japan that the country might be Christianized.

The girl's home is in Tokio. Think of coming all the way from that point and finding one in Rushville she knew in Tokio. Such was the experience of the little Japanese. Miss Jeanne Bishop, a teacher of music here, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Willard Amos in North Perkins street was born in Tokio. Her parents are missionaries there and are still engaged in carrying on the work. When Miss Ishihara saw Miss Bishop she was elated. "I knew her when she was but that high" she said, leveling her hand with her waist line. The two enjoyed several hours together talking over Tokio and the mutual friends they have there. It was indeed an enjoyable meeting.

The Jap girl is but eighteen years of age. She will soon complete her education in this country and go back to Japan for permanent residence. She has a wide experience for one of her years. Every Sunday she writes a letter home and yesterday, although her day was a strenuous one, she stopped long enough to send a letter home. "I'm the baby" she said, with a smile playing on her countenance, and her little eyes closing with merriment and if I not send letter, they come, they take me home." She has one brother who is an officer in the Japanese army and two sisters who are nurses.

The girl was attired in her native costume and a glimpse at her convinced one that she could give the American girls cards and spades when it came to wearing a kimono gracefully. And while she did not wear the latest thing in the way of braided hair, or puffs, or things, her rich black hair was done up neatly on her head, in fact, she was the personification of neatness. In this respect, our heathen sisters are farther advanced than the corset-squeezed, face-painted, powder-smear, pinched-foot, uncomfortably dressed Americans.

Miss Ishihara wore an American dress coming from Cincinnati on the train. It was the first time in her life she ever wore one. Her pretty lips curled up, in disgust, as she looked down at the dress: "Ooh! I feel so funny with it. Me - I - don't like it - you know--but I do not like the stares when they all see me with my own dresses." And like her American sister she is becoming a "slave" to fashion.

The young lady has the distinction of enjoying a scholarship in the school she is attending, given to her by the mother of William H. Taft, candidate for President. One of the most interesting stories the girl tells is of her visit to the White House, where she was the guest of President Roosevelt. After arrangements had been made for the call, the little lady who had not been long in this country then and could not master the language any better than a three-year-old baby, set about to improve her English and increase her vocabulary as rapidly as possible. She says she understood one of the favorite words with the President was "delighted." This word she intended to use as soon as she was presented, in the sentence, "Most gracious President, I am delighted to meet you."

Over and over again she rehearsed the sentence, repeating it aloud in the privacy of her chamber, and to a few friends she recited the sentence to learn if she had it correct. It is difficult to chronicle in the exact language the girl used in telling of that visit, but it was most interesting and amusing. The story removed of the dialect, as told by the girl was something like this:

"Oooh, I had practiced oh, so long, and so hard. I was so glad to see your great President. I wanted him to think well of me. I would rush up to him--take his strong hand in mine and say--'I am - O - so delighted to see you, sire.' But it was all so different--you know. When he came into our room--I trembled when I did see him. He was, oh, so severe looking. Then he smiled. I felt good. Then he came to me with a rush. He took my hand--oh, so quick and sa--and so - so rough and squeezed my hand. He say 'I am dee-lighted to meet you.' Then what was I to say? Nothing. I could not think of anything. He say it before me. It was some time--oh, so long--before I could say anything."

Like all Japanese women, Miss Kiku has very small feet. "Let me see your feet," said the newspaper representative. "Oooh, I am afraid of you newspaper people--but I will show you."

And out from under the folds of her pretty silk skirt was extended "two of the cutest, iddle, tootsie wootsies" imaginable.

BEGIN PRACTICE FOR NEW CASTLE

High School Foot Ball Team to Correct Serious Blunders
Made Saturday.

ONLY HARD WORK FOR THEM

Now that Shelbyville is out of the way and in the defeated column, the Rushville high school foot ball team is at work for New Castle next Saturday. They will do a little more practicing this week than they did last week. By their work Saturday they showed that they have an aggregation of the best material which the school has had for some time. They are husky fellows and know the game, but they showed a woeful lack of practice. The backs were inexcusably slow and consequently could make practically no gains through Shelbyville's line. The Rushville line played entirely too high, and were so slow in their charging that Shelbyville tore holes in the line time and again. But they are going to correct this difficulty and from now on play real foot ball. They have woke up to the fact that only hard practice will enable them to do this.

GREAT DAY FOR COLORED PEOPLE

Cause of Temperance and Morality
Furthered by Eloquent Addresses.

BIG MAN SPOKE HERE SUNDAY

And Colored People Rallied Around the Black Moses of America--
Praise is Due Them.

Sunday was a banner occasion among the colored people of this city for the cause of morality and temperance. Dr. C. W. McColl, president of the Colored Anti-Saloon League of America, delivered three addresses in our city and left behind a decidedly good impression.

At the Second M. E. church in the forenoon, Dr. McColl preached an eloquent and scholarly sermon, one that clearly demonstrated his learning and research. Several white citizens, knowing Dr. McColl's reputation as a theologian were out to hear him and were presented to him at the close of his discourse.

Prof. Williams read a letter from Mr. Shumake, State president of the Anti-Saloon League, in which was set forth the magnitude of Dr. McColl's labors for temperance, and calling upon the colored people to lend every aid to the same cause.

Rev. Leggett, at this juncture made a very fervid appeal to his congregation in behalf of support to temperance movements, and took occasion to review their advancement in the several States.

In the afternoon, Dr. McColl was introduced by Prof. Williams, who made a forceful presentation of the importance of the temperance movement, emphasizing especially its national and racial aspects.

Dr. McColl now devoted his whole address to the cause of temperance. He reviewed historically the rise and growth of the saloon, the establishment of the license system, and the gradual deterioration of the quality of spirituous liquors. He then, in an eloquent and forceful manner portrayed the many evils growing out of the saloon, and set it forth as a principle that the duty of curbing and ultimately ending the liquor traffic is one that cannot rightly be put aside.

At the Second Baptist church, after a fitting introduction by Prof. Williams, the Doctor preached a very profound sermon, drawing his material from the lives of Jacob, Esau, and Elisha. The discourse abounded in apt illustrations, and the thought of it all was driven in upon the minds of his hearers, so that there could be no doubt as to its meaning.

Rev. Shumake made an after appeal to his church members to treasure up the things that were said and the general attention and assent of his members indicated that the discourses had struck home.

The colored people are to be commended for their zeal in the cause of morality and temperance, for, in no wise can they better show their fitness for citizenship than by supporting the great reform movements of the day.

While in the city, Dr. McColl was the guest of Prof. Williams and family.

The Old Soldiers' Watson Club--sixty-four strong--will go to Columbus tomorrow night.

EUROPE BEGINS TO COOL DOWN

Balkan Eruption Not to Get Beyond Loud Noise Stage.

NEGOTIATIONS PROGRESSING

Divergent Views Held by the Powers With Respect to the Proposed Conference of the Signatories of the Berlin Treaty Are to Be Reconciled in Some Form According to a Program New Being Outlined in London—Servians Find That They Are Not So Anxious After All to Go to War.

London, Oct. 12.—The near Eastern situation, so far as the Anglo-Russian negotiations are concerned, remains where it did twenty-four hours ago. There was unusual activity at Buckingham palace Sunday, to which the king returned Saturday morning, and at the British foreign office and the Russian embassy, where M. Isvolsky, the Russian foreign minister, is staying, the officials were busily engaged in an exchange of telegrams with the European capitals. There also were numerous exchanges of courtesies, the king and other members of the royal family and the cabinet ministers showing M. Isvolsky much attention.

Something definite doubtless will transpire before the close of the day. Secretary Grey attended the cabinet meeting this morning and formally acquainted his colleagues with the progress of the negotiations. This was merely a formal proceeding, as Sir Edward not only has the fullest support of the government, but also of the king and the whole nation. In every quarter confidence is expressed in his ability to reach a friendly settlement, and the policy he has adopted from the beginning of the crisis has received the unanimous endorsement of the government leaders, the newspapers and all parties.

After the cabinet meeting the foreign secretary again met M. Isvolsky, and so certain are all the parties concerned that today's meeting will bring the negotiations to a successful close that it is predicted a statement to that effect will be introduced in parliament, which assembled today for its autumn session, during the course of the evening. The king apparently shares this view, as he has arranged to leave London for several days on Tuesday.

The visits of the Italian and German ambassadors to the foreign office on Saturday and the friendly exchanges between their governments and Great Britain has helped to smooth the path of those who are undertaking the negotiations. Not the slightest indication, however, has been given as to how the divergent views held by the powers with respect to the proposed conferences of the signatories of the Berlin treaty are to be reconciled. More favorable news from the Balkans, including the reported action of the Serbian national assembly in voting against war, has further strengthened the belief that there will be no eruption.

The Greek government, in reply to the British pronouncement that until a legal status has been restored in the island of Crete, Great Britain cannot hold out any hope that the Cretan aspirations will be granted, points out the difficulty of the position of the administration at Athens, which in no way prompted the Cretans to declare union with Greece. The Greek government expresses its willingness that the powers should decide the question of union between Crete and Greece, but at the same time it declares that there is no means within its power of forcing the Cretans to restore the legal condition of affairs. The Greek government, the reply states, will continue to act with moderation, although it cannot understand why the powers cannot consider the Cretan affair at the same time it takes the Bulgarian and Austrian questions under advisement.

NOT READY FOR WAR

On Second Thought Servians Decide to Go Slow.

Belgrade, Serbia, Oct. 12.—After a secret session, lasting for more than twenty-four hours, the Narodna-Skupstina, or national assembly, adjourned last evening without having arrived at any definite decision with regard to its action against Austria-Hungary.

The assembly met again today.

According to the most reliable information the vote was taken on the question at issue. The meeting was a very stormy one and was interrupted by various recesses. War was demanded with Austria-Hungary, but the leaders of the war faction cooled down after Foreign Minister Milovanovic had made a lengthy statement in which he explained that one reason why hostilities were impossible was the scarcity of ammunition for the new batteries, which are now being transported here, but have been detained on the Austrian line. The leaders of all parties complained earnestly that the government's protest to the powers against the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was not couched in sufficiently strong terms, but the foreign minister eventually succeeded in convincing the house of the correctness of the cabinet's attitude, and it is anticipated that today the assembly will adopt a vote of confidence in the government.

Thus, for the moment, the danger point in the Balkan crisis is passed and Serbia is expected to content herself temporarily by instituting a boycott against Austro-Hungarian commerce in the way of revenge. It was stated today that M. Milovanovic will shortly proceed to London, Paris and Rome to lay Serbia's claims before the powers. A representative of the French foreign office has arrived here on a special mission.

Despite the warlike language of the crown prince on Saturday, when he declared before the angered thousands who had gathered at the palace that he believed they all soon would be able to offer their lives in defense of the king and the fatherland, demonstrations in the streets are becoming less numerous and less serious and apparently the people are beginning to realize that war would mean the annihilation of Serbia.

Reports published abroad that a general mobilization of the Serbian army has been ordered are incorrect. Only the first reserves have been called out and it is not intended to summon the other classes at the present time. With the first reserves there will be only 400,000 men under arms altogether.

A Hint to Austria.

Cettinje, Montenegro, Oct. 12.—During a demonstration in the streets Sunday a band of rioters tore down the coat-of-arms from the Austrian consulate.

A STRENUOUS WEEK FOR THE CANDIDATES

Fast and Furious Grows the Presidential Campaign.

New York, Oct. 12.—With the extraordinary developments in the Balkans stirring the capitals of Europe to the uttermost depths, foreign news well may be expected to take rank even with the political chronicles of the week. Yet, faster and more furiously is the presidential campaign being driven as the candidates approach the home stretch in the great race.

The opening of the week finds both Taft and Bryan in their own states. For both there have been arranged strenuous trips covering the first three days of the week. Bryan's program is said to call for quite fifty speeches in eastern and central Nebraska, and he will then proceed to Illinois and Indiana. Taft will speak in big and small places in Ohio, in halls and at open-air meetings from trains and on balconies on the same days that Mr. Bryan is haranguing his fellow-Nebraskans. The remainder of the week will be spent by Mr. Taft in the South.

Only two dates, today in East Orange, N. J., and Saturday in Wilmington, Del., have been arranged for Mr. Sherman, but it is understood that the intervening time will be well filled in by engagements yet to be arranged. Mr. Kern will start from his home in Indianapolis for another tour, which will take him to New York city, Newark, N. J., Bridgeport, Conn., and Utica, N. Y.

Governor Hughes, fresh from his Western trip, will be in his own state throughout the entire week, today beginning a tour that will include more than 100 addresses before the campaign is ended. New York also is to hear Secretary Root and Secretary Strauss, while still another member of the cabinet, Mr. Wilson, starts out on Thursday for a speaking tour of the agricultural states in the West.

Mailbag Disappears.

Salt Lake, Oct. 12.—A mailpouch containing eight registered packages destined for the East, disappeared here and is believed to have been stolen while reposing on a truck at the Denver & Rio Grande railroad station. The pouch was made up at the local postoffice and was delivered to the mail-wagon driver, who declares that he unloaded it at the station. No estimate of the value of the registered packages can be made at this time.

New Transit Enterprise.

Huntington, Ind., Oct. 12.—J. C. Curtis, general manager of the C. B. & Q. railroad, with general offices in this city, has announced he and Chicago capitalists will ask the city council for a franchise to operate an auto transit system on the city streets. Four large touring cars will be operated over regular routes, and if improvement of streets is necessary the company will do the work at its own expense. The city has no streetcar service.

INVESTOR WANTS RECEIVER

Stockholder in South Bend Concern Charges Salary Grab.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 12.—Claiming Harry Engman, Jacob Wolverton and William Kizer have conspired to convert the profits of the Malleable Steel Range company into salaries, and that he has failed to realize on his heavy investment because of the action of the directors, Irving A. Sibley has filed suit for a receiver in the supreme court.

The complaint avers Harry E. Engman, as president, draws a salary of $7,000; William L. Kizer, secretary, $6,000, and Jacob Wolverton, vice president and treasurer, $2,000 annually, an amount equal to the total amount paid into the business by the plaintiff and defendants when the company was started in 1899.

The plaintiff alleges officers have given but little attention to the doings of the Malleable Steel Range company; that they are planning to construct a malleable iron plant that would cost $100,000 and another $50,000 for equipment, and that the defendants should not be permitted to encumber the properties of the incorporation by putting a large debt on it.

The plaintiff says he is of the belief that Mr. Kizer and Mr. Wolverton pool their earnings and divide equally between themselves incomes of the officers of the corporation; that Mr. Wolverton is president of the St. Joseph County Savings bank, and is devoting the greater part of his time to the bank.

Foresters Choose Laporte.

Laporte, Ind., Oct. 12.—The next meeting of the high court of the Indiana Foresters will be held in this city. The convention, which has been in session at Lowell, adjourned with the election of the following officers: High chief ranger, Thomas H. Hall, Crown Point; high vice chief ranger, A. L. Blatchley, Chesterton; high secretary, Joseph P. Young, Crown Point; high treasurer, J. Lowestine, Valparaiso; high medical examiner, P. T. Moore, Wabash; high board of directors, Dr. Grey of Laporte and Arthur Minnich of Lowell.

Fined for Whipping Teacher.

Hammond, Ind., Oct. 12.—School patrons must not whip the teachers of Hammond schools decided Judge W. A. Jordan when he fined Mrs. Morley Thompson 25 cents and costs for assault and battery upon Miss Mary Stein, a teacher in the Franklin school. Miss Stein recently attempted to correct the daughter of Mrs. Thompson, whereupon the mother in a rage set upon the teacher. Mrs. Thompson pleaded guilty and expressed repentance of her rash act. The charges were preferred by the school board in behalf of Miss Stein.

IT ENDS IN DEATH FOR ONE

Tragedy Due to Drink and to a Dispute Regarding a Political Convention—Before Anyone Could Interfere Charles Offerjost Had Struck a Fatal Blow and Henry Offerjost Lay Dead—Prisoner Declares He Had No Intention of Doing Injury to His Brother

Rising Sun, Ind., Oct. 12.—Henry Offerjost is dead as a result of a fight with his brother Charles in a saloon owned by Scranton Brothers in Rising Sun. The brothers had been employed on the farm owned by J. M. Pate of this city. They were drinking and became engaged in a quarrel about politics and before anyone could interfere Charles struck Henry.

Charles Offerjost was found by the officers in the barn on the farm on which he lived, armed with a shotgun. He at first refused to accompany the officers, but was later persuaded by his friends to come to this city and surrender himself. Offerjost made the following statement:

"I came to this city and met my brother, who works near Patriot. He had been drinking and we went back to the saloon. I had been drinking a little. He asked me why I didn't go to the convention, and when I said it was not my party he struck at me. I hit him twice, first with my left hand. I had no intention of injuring him."

Most Important Wars.

Perhaps the most important wars, from the standpoint of civilization and progress, were, first, the Greek-Persian war of 490 B. C., in which the oriental wave was prevented from deluging Europe; second, the struggle between the Franks and Moors, which ended at the battle of Tours with the defeat of the Moors, thus saving Europe from Mohammedanism and its stagnation; third, the Napoleonic wars, which shook up Europe, destroying the remnants of feudalism and paving the way for modern democracy, and the American war of 1861-65, which preserved the integrity of the great republic and so made it possible for the United States to work out its splendid destiny among the nations of the earth.—New York American.

"Yes."

His Preference.

REPUBLICAN PARTY AND LABOR

An Equality of Opportunities Secured for Wage Earners.

William H. Taft's Speech of Acceptance Gives Party Record in Behalf of Labor.

(William H. Taft in his speech of acceptance.)

We come now to the question of labor. One important phase of the policies of the present administration has been an anxiety to secure for the wage-earner an equality of opportunity and such positive statutory protection as shall place him on a level in dealing with his employer.

The Republican party has passed an employers' liability act for interstate railroads, and has established an eight hour law for government employees and on government construction. The essence of the reform effected by the former, is the abolition of the fellow-servant rule and the introduction of the comparative negligence theory by which an employee injured in the service of his employer does not lose all his right to recover because of slight negligence on his part.

Then there is the act providing for compensation for injury to government employees, together with the various statutes requiring safety appliances upon interstate commerce railroads for the protection of their employees and limiting the hours of their employment.

These are all instances of the desire of the Republican party to do justice to the wage-earners.

Doubtless a more comprehensive measure for compensation of government employees will be adopted in the future; the principle in such cases has been recognized and in the necessarily somewhat slow course of legislation will be more fully embodied in definite statutes.

The interests of the employer and the employee never differ except when it comes to a division of the joint profit of labor and capital into dividends and wages. This must be a constant source of periodical discussion between the employer and the employee, as indeed are the other terms of the employment.

To give to employees their proper position in such a controversy, to enable them to maintain themselves against employers having great capital, they may well unite, because in union there is strength, and without it, each individual laborer and employee would be helpless. The promotion of the industrial peace through the instrumentality of the trade agreement is one of the results of such union when intelligently conducted.

There is a large body of laborers, however, skilled and unskilled, who are not organized into unions. Their rights before the law are exactly the same as those of the union men, and are to be protected with the same care and watchfulness.

In order to induce their employer into a compliance with their request for changed terms of employment, workmen have the right to strike in a body.

They have a right to use such persuasion as they may, provided it does not reach the point of duress, to lead their reluctant co-laborers to join them in their union against their employer, and they have a right, if they choose, to accumulate funds to support those engaged in a strike, to delegate to officers the power to direct the action of the union, and to withdraw themselves and their associates from dealings with or giving custom to those with whom they are in controversy.

TAFT'S KINDNESS TO BLIND.

Overrules Washington Monument Regulation for Benefit of the Sightless.

The kind heartedness of Mr. Taft and his sincere, common sense sympathy with the unfortunates in this world has just been brought to the attention of the blind in a peculiar way.

Away up in the top of the Washington monument, where thousands go to behold the beauties of the nation's capital, the Columbia Polytechnic institute, which seeks to make it possible for the adult blind of the United States to rise above conditions of dependence by becoming self sustaining, placed on sale souvenir post cards manufactured by its blind. Some sentimental persons took the view that this was undignified and succeeded in having the superintendent of public buildings and grounds order the cards removed. F. E. Cleveland, principal of the institute, appealed to Mr. Taft, then secretary of war and within whose jurisdiction came the office of public buildings and grounds. It took only a few words to convince the secretary that the blind should have the benefit of this privilege, and the cards were again placed on sale in the monument.

"For this action," said Principal Cleveland in discussing the incident, "Mr. Taft deserves the gratitude of every blind person, particularly the progressive blind, who are striving to help their less fortunate fellows."

In Georgia the electors must have a majority, and with Watson, Higen and Chafin pulling away from them the Bryanites are becoming apprehensive.

DEMOCRATIC HOPES SIDETRACKED

Taft and Foraker Shoulder to Shoulder for Republican Principles.

Another Democratic hope has been sidetracked. That was that United States Senator Foraker would not support the Taft candidacy, and would thus impair his chances of carrying the State of Ohio.

The two big Ohioans fittingly met at the G. A. R. reunion in Toledo, and publicly and good-naturedly cast what differences may have existed between them to the air.

Mr. Taft's contribution to the treaty of peace was as follows:

"It is a pleasure for me to be here with Senator Foraker, because when governor of Ohio he gave me my first chance and took a good deal of risk in putting a man of 29 on the bench of the Superior Court of Cincinnati. We are about to enter—or rather have entered—a great oratorical campaign. It is a pleasure to think in this presence that we are going to stand in the campaign shoulder to shoulder, with the full strength of the Republican party."

In response Senator Foraker denied that enmity had existed between Mr. Taft and himself, and said:

"Under the circumstances I hope I may be pardoned if I say here in this presence—the first time I have had opportunity to say it—that there is not now and so far as I know there never has been the slightest ill feeling of any kind between Mr. Taft and myself.

"If there is anything I have a right to claim beyond another, it is that I am Republican three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. I have my preferences sometimes as to who should receive the honors of the party, and everybody generally finds out what they are. But I am one of those old-fashioned Republicans who settle every such question at the convention. When the Chicago convention nominated Mr. Taft to be the Republican candidate for the Presidency this year, that instant he became my leader. He has been my leader ever since, and he will be my leader until the polls close on the night of the election."

Mr. Foraker followed with an estimate of Judge Taft's fitness for the office he seeks by repeating what Bishop Fallows had said before him.

"I want to repeat it," he said, "that his experience on the bench, in the Philippines, as Secretary of War, in the construction of the Panama Canal, in all the positions he has filled, has been such as to qualify Mr. Taft almost beyond every other man for the Presidency. We are going to elect him, and if he does not make a success of it, it will be his own fault."

Senator Foraker followed this statement with a review of his early acquaintance with Judge Taft, and the favorable impression he then gained of him.

WHERE SHERMAN STANDS.

Approves Legislation to Improve the Conditions of Labor.

(From Sherman's Speech of Acceptance.)

The Republican party believes in the equality of all men before the law; believes in granting labor's every request that does not seek to accord rights to one man denied to another. Fair-minded labor asks no more, no less, and approves the record of the Republican party because of that party's acts.

I have helped to make my party's record in the enactment of the Eight-Hour law, the Employers' Liability act, the statutes to minimize the hazard of railroad employees, the Child Labor law for the District of Columbia and other enactments designed especially to improve the conditions of labor. I cannot hope to better state my position on injunctions than by a specific endorsement of Mr. Taft's Cincinnati declaration on that subject. That endorsement I make.

But He Runs on Forever.

(From the New York Sun.)

What will Mr. Bryan say After next election day? Mr. Bryan will insist That he is an optimist. Beaten three times! What of that? He's the one great Democrat! Willing for his fellow men To be beaten once again.

Read the Commoner and learn! Mr. Bryan, Mr. Kern, Sail together on this trip In the old, oft stranded ship. (They have quarters in the stern.)

In this antiquated craft, While they gaze at Mr. Taft Miles ahead—the race near done And by Taft and Sherman won— Mr. Bryan, ever wise, Doubtless will philosophize And to Mr. Kern recite That remark, already trite, All prepared and often sprung: "Beaten? Yes, but I'm still young! I can wait another four Years, then try the race once more, I have got this thing done yet. I'm the one great Democrat!" —Julian Durant.

Making or Keeping Promises.

The difference between Mr. Taft's promise of tariff revision and Mr. Bryan's pledges in the same direction is that Mr. Taft if elected will be in position to redeem his pledge, while Mr. Bryan if elected would be powerless to accomplish anything with a Republican Senate arrayed against his.

willing to be judged by what he has done as well as by what he promises to do and whose election to the presidency will be final, conclusive and decisive rejection by the American people of Bryanism. Its vagaries and its menace to the national credit, prosperity and progress.

Bryanism Must Be Buried.

Considering that Mr. Bryan this year has been at his best, that he has been able for expediency to lay aside his radicalism and adopt more moderate tactics, still he does not and never can measure up to the standard of chief magistrate. He is for one thing very unfortunate in his friends and associates. There is not one of them that we want to see in the cabinet or on the supreme court bench or representing us abroad.

There is not a single one of Mr. Bryan's 1908 ideas that we want to adopt. So we are going to defeat Mr. Bryan once more, but it must be so decisive that Bryanism must be buried forever. For twelve years he has been a menace to business stability, a menace to prosperity, a menace to good government. The Democratic party must be rehabilitated, must find some statesman in its ranks to lead it four years hence. But first Mr. Bryan must be buried, and buried deep, on the 3d of November.

A Georgia negro who shot a sheriff without seriously wounding him was promptly lynched by a party of Bryan's political supporters who are asking the northern negro to vote for Bryan and Kern, while they deny to the southern negro a trial when accused of crime.

Mr. Bryan pliantly submits that he has been a tariff reformer for twenty-eight years, has advocated popular election of senators for twelve and has favored an income tax for fourteen. A good fisherman in a case like this would be inclined to try fresh bait.

Free trademeans cheap men, and free silver means a cheap dollar for the payment of their wages. Mr. Bryan holds that the present dollar "buys too much." Do you believe that, Mr. Wage Earner?

President Roosevelt announced that he would put "a little ginger" into the campaign, and he did, but Mr. Bryan insists that it was tabasco.

It is possible that Bryan finds all his troubles less than the discussion of the guarantee of bank deposits.
Taft's deeds against Bryan's word. That contrast, invited by Mr. Roosevelt, cannot fail to make votes for Taft.
The enfranchised colored citizen will not vote against the party that gave him the ballot, and for the party that has robbed him of it in the South.
The base ball season is about over and foot ball is looming large. This means that we shall have to unlearn or forget the base ball language we have acquired during the summer and learn the one that describes the doings on the gridiron.
The managers of the Independence party's campaign in Indiana have filed with the secretary of the State a petition, signed by over 1000 names asking that the Independence ticket be placed on the ballot. The signatures were obtained in various sections of the State. Under the law 500 signatures are sufficient to insure a ticket place on the ballot.
The moderate campaign contributions have resulted in the elimination of the hired spellbinder this year for the most part but there is a good substitute for him. The local school house and town hall speaker is a more potent factor after all in shaping the judgment of the people. He gives his service gratuitously and from conviction of duty. A labor of love counts for more than a paid performance.
This is indeed a wasteful country, and, as has been developed through the agitation over good roads, the United States is the only nation which can afford to have bad roads. Only nations that have apparently limitless resources can waste their blessings with an improvident hand. Other nations have to make and maintain roads that will enable them to market their products with the least possible expense.
The Scientific American says: "There is no surer test of the prosperity of the country than the number of idle cars on its railroads; and any reduction in the total may be taken as a sure indication that the wheels of industry are turning more rapidly. Consequently, the recent report of the Committee on Car Efficiency of the American Railway Association, which tells of a decrease of over fifty thousand in the number of idle cars in two weeks of September, is the most encouraging sign of returning prosperity that has been given for months."

The poll just taken in Indiana proved to be the same old round-up which has come to the same result about the 10th of October in each of the presidential campaigns since 1892. It is a habit to follow the best that the opposition can offer till they pass their limit, and then with the fall-down of the tide returns to the Republican candidates whose party's work has stood the test with nothing so good or better offered by the Democratic side.
How or why William Jennings Bryan acquired his hatred for the American gold dollar has never been explained, but that his hatred is deep and lasting nobody can deny. It found characteristic expression in a speech he delivered in Wheeling, W. Va., in which, speaking of the bolt of the sound money Democrats, he said: "I call your attention to another thing, and that is that, instead of declaring themselves gold standard men, they call themselves advocates of sound money, because they are ashamed to use the name even that describes their position. Instead of saying they are for gold they prate about an honest dollar, when they know the gold dollar is the most dishonest dollar in the land today."
One gets the impression that the gold dollar has been playing tricks on Mr. Bryan or that it has got the better of him in a horse trade or something. But even if that were true it hardly warrants him in calling the gold dollar the most dishonest dollar in the land. As a matter of fact, there is no dishonest dollar in the land unless it be a counterfeit. Yet it is remembered that Mr. Bryan wanted to adopt a coin which, while pretending to be a dollar, would really have been worth only fifty cents and which would therefore have been a dishonest dollar and a monetary lie.
While Mr. Bryan was denouncing the gold dollar as dishonest, many conservative business men, realizing the ruinous condition that would follow his election, stipulated that contracts into which they entered should specifically be "payable in gold." Their views as to the integrity of the gold dollar was exactly the reverse of Mr. Bryan's.
The gold dollar has not changed since Mr. Bryan condemned it. If it was dishonest then it must be dishonest now. Yet we venture to say for the benefit of those whom it may concern—if any—that this modest yellow coin so hated by Candidate Bryan will be accepted at par in payment of subscriptions to Editor Bryan's newspaper.

AILEEN WILSON RACES TO FORM

That is the Reason Why the Rushville Mare is the Best in the Country.
INDIANAPOLIS STAR'S BOOST
Dick Wilson Has Had a Bread Winner With the Fastest Horse He Ever Owned.

Aileen Wilson did not commence to gather in the coin at a very early date in the season, but after she did get good she proved to be invincible, said the Indianapolis Sunday Star, of Rush county's great racing mare. Along in the middle of the summer she could have been purchased at a very reasonable price, but after her world's record breaking performance over the Indianapolis track Wilson realized that he had the best pacing mare out racing this year and he refused a very tempting offer for her.
His judgment was confirmed by the manner in which she won at Columbus and Dick and his friends made a killing there that well paid him for all the time he had spent in getting her ready. Coming from out of "the woods" so to speak, the wise ones that had been following the circuit did not think she was up to beating the cracks. The Indiana trainer had to reduce the record of his mare to 2:02½, but she never was a place in the three miles when he was really in danger.
This daughter of Arrowwood has been a great winner for the Rushville man. Last season he campaigned all the way down the line with her and wound up the season at Richmond, Va. She did not win all her races, but she won a plenty, and won when she was expected. This last is the real test of the great race mare. Sometimes a horse goes out and wins a remarkable race when neither the owner nor the trainer are expecting it. That kind are not consistent race horses and are not, as a rule, profitable investments.
The horse that will not race to form all the time lays over the phenomenal in-and-outer even though the former should not be quite so fast. Aileen Wilson fills the requirements of a great race mare, for in addition to her great speed, she can be depended upon to do her best all the time. She has been the bread winner for Wilson for two successive years.

JOHN KERN'S MEMORANDUM BOOK

In the realm of great "reformers," there is one named Johnny Kern; He's a perfect right to pocket all the fees that he can earn. He despises corporations—you can see it in his look— But he ought to be more careful of his memorandum book.
He is bitter in denouncing predatory wealth and greed, And in this he shows he's honest by his every word and deed. He excoriates the railroads as a law-defying class, And he's stumping Indiana on a Big Four yearly pass.
It is surely "one on Johnny," who is taking crowds by storm With his earnest forceful pleading for political "reform." While he's riding in the coaches, taking lunches a la mode, To be "bawled right out" in public as attorney for the road.
Just imagine Johnny "spouting" where his words are highly prized, When he's distanced William Howard and has Teddy paralyzed, When he's got the railroads throttled and his logic none can brook— To be greeted by the spectre of that memorandum book.
You should be more careful, Johnny, where you keep your pasteboard hid, If the fact of its existence you would keep beneath your "lid." For it's highly inconsistent and it takes a lot o' brass To denounce a corporation while you're riding on its pass.
Right here we draw the curtain over Johnny's tragic fate; That incident has weakened him as Bryan's running mate. There are lots of such "reformers," whose houses are of glass, But who haven't been so careless with their yearly railroad pass. Marion, Ind., Oct. 6, 1908. —PLINY HARLAN.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

(Milroy Press.)
The people here are grateful to T. D. Stewart for the free use of the water works this month. He is making no charge for the sprinkling. While there were many times during the summer when water was short, yet he did the best he could, and the sprinkling was a great benefit to the town.

ALL-DAY SUCKERS.
(Hope Journal.)
The "all-day sucker," made of candy, has become epidemic in Hope. The older people have gone to sucking the same as the children and you can see a demonstration on the west side most any old time. So far no physician has reported as having been required to remove the wooden stick from the lung of a full grown "infant," but such an accident might happen to the older classes who have been out of practice for years, but not likely to with any one at school age.

THEY HIT THE PIPE.
Connersville Courier: A Rushville paper says the cause of the fire that felled a tree across the I. & C. traction track a few days ago, was the "burning end of a cigar, thrown away by a Rushville rural mail carrier." Rural carriers out of Connersville are only too glad to smoke a pipe, let alone a cigar.

TAGGART FOR SENATE.
(Greenfield Tribune.)
The Indianapolis Sun which poses as the only really pure genuine Democratic organ in Indianapolis, says that the Democrats must carry the Legislature this year and elect Thomas Taggart, the King of French Lick, United States Senator. The French Lick hotel that Taggart runs is where it took the whole legal machinery of the State to drive out gambling. Mr. Taggart has been for many years the chief manager and friend of the big brewers in Indiana when they wanted political work done. Just think of Tom Taggart being a United States Senator and trying to fill the place of such illustrious and able Democrats as Daniel W. Voorhees, Thomas A. Hendricks, Joseph B. McDonald and David Turpie, not to mention the many able and splendid Republicans who have represented Indiana in the United States Senate.

Red Cross Ball Blue
Should be in every home. Ask your grocer for it. Large 2 oz. package, 5 cents.

AMUSEMENTS

The Vaudeville tonight and tomorrow night will offer Florence Mack & Co., a company of recognized artists, presenting pictures that talk. This company has appeared in the leading houses over the State, and their work is highly spoken of, which will give the patrons of the five cent theaters a chance to witness the best ever seen here.
At the Grand tonight will be shown the comic story film, "A Title." The illustrated song, "The Last Voyage" is one of the best of the season. It is a story of a sailor and the deep.
Probably the rarest treat of the season in a theatrical way—that is the one that will prove the most popular with the largest majority of people is the coming of the well known musical comedy stars, Gus and Max Rogers, in their newest vehicle, "Rogers Bros. in Panama."

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

She looked like the lady at the carnival getting ready to make the high dive. At the top of a fifteen-foot ladder, ten o'clock at night (last night) stood one of Rushville's most dashing and attractive young women, from which she climbed into the second story of the home where she resides. Three or four neighbors gathered about and assisted her in making "the daring flight to the dizzy heights." No wonder pedestrians stopped as they came along and when the young lady went through the window fully twenty-five people were standing below. A little cheer went up when the persistent female climbed through the raised window. Really, it was a funny stunt. She had been left alone; the other members of the household leaving the city for the day. They gave her specific instructions how to turn the night lock. Of course, she did it the wrong way and late last night found she had locked herself out in the cold. Arousing some of the good neighbors, who secured a ladder at a church, the young lady was able to gain an entrance—although it came about in a spectacular way—and she fell across her bed a bunch of nerves working with a three-cylinder throb.

TO STUDY BIBLE AS LITERATURE

Mrs. Donnan's Class Begins a New Course of Study at its First Meeting.
COURSE IS A POPULAR ONE
Bible is Shown to be Very Substance of the Best English Literature.

Mrs. Donnan's class held its first meeting at the home of Mrs. Ora Wilson Saturday afternoon. The membership is larger than ever before. The "Bible as Literature" is one of Mrs. Donnan's most popular courses of study and wherever it has been given classes have almost doubled in size.
Mrs. Donnan's purpose is to show how the Bible has "grown into the very substance" of the best of English literature and how rich the masterpieces are in Biblical allusions and phrases. An example of this is Kipling's best known poem, "Recessional," containing eleven Biblical allusions.
A technical analysis on paper is prepared for each lesson, and there shall be lessons on "The Bible in Shakespeare, Browning, Tennyson, Milton and Kipling."
Mrs. Donnan called attention to three plays that are well worthy of the praise they are receiving: "Chatterbox," Edmond Rostand's latest production; "Dr. Faustus," an adaptation of Goethe's Faust by an English playwright; "The Servant in the House," by Chas. Raun Kennedy, is a play in which Christ is the servant. It is educational in tone and is one of the plays which is to bring to the stage recognition as a moral influence.
The next meeting will be Saturday afternoon, October 24. Others who wish to come into the class may do so at that time and lose nothing of the regular work.

One of the Brainiest and Coming Young Men of Indiana to be Here Tonight.

SPEAKS AT THE K. OF P. HALL

Oliver H. Carson, an attorney of Indianapolis, and one of the brightest and brainiest men in Indiana's metropolis, will deliver a Republican speech here tonight at the Republican headquarters.
Those who heard him at one of the Men's Big Meetings last winter have cause to expect much in the way of a political gem of a speech tonight. He has a magnificent voice, pleasing manner and easy platform presence. Mr. Carson is one of the coming men of Indiana and it will be a treat to hear him.

THIS MATTER OF SMOKE. We are sure that our view of the cigar business is unusual. Most druggists and all cigar dealers sell cigars to make money. We sell them to make friends—and money too in the long run. We want to get smokers into the store and let them judge what kind of a business we conduct by the kind of a cigar they get. In cigars as in drugs we get the best that money can buy.

SALOON MAN PUTS UP LARGE HOLLER

Was Assessed by Both the County and State Democratic Central Committee.

SAYS HE'S UP AGAINST IT

It would seem from current reports that the local Democratic party has levied an assessment against saloonkeepers of the city says the New Castle Courier. The proceeds of which are to be used in a fight on the Republican county ticket and there is some dissension in the ranks of the liquor dealers because one of their number has not coughed up. It is asserted that he claims to have paid a like assessment in Indianapolis, while over there, it is said, he claimed he paid it here, and there you are.

Just how much this assessment was has not been ascertained. The party leaders are saying nothing about it and the saloonists will not, either. There is one saloon man, however, who has expressed his sentiments in very strong terms. He says he doesn't mind paying just as much as any other, but that he does not like the idea of one of them dodging the issue and getting out of his share of the expense.

The Democratic committee is finding it hard to get local saloonists interested in the fight against county option, since most of them have gone out of business and are doing better in other lines than they ever did in the liquor trade.

Lady Betty Across the Water

By C. N. & A. M. WILLIAMSON * COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"I was so interested in going over to conversation in my mind that I forgot to feel like Bean Brummel with one paw up in his glass case, and though I dare say ten minutes had passed, it hardly seemed two, when a wonderful little black image in the shape of a boy came sidling up to me, all rolling white eyes and red grin, like a nice Newfoundland puppy. He had some newspapers tucked under his arm, but in his hand was a small basket of peaches almost too beautiful to be real. But then, weren't they—and wasn't he—part of my dream?"

He grinned so much more that I was afraid his round black face would break into two separate halves, and looking at me with his woolly head on one side, he thrust out the basket.

"Fur you, missy," said he, with a funny little accent, for all the world like Sally Woodburn's.

"They can't be for me. There must be a mistake," said I, wishing there wasn't, for the peaches did look delicious, and there were two rosebuds lying on top of the basket, one pink, the other white. "I don't know any one who could have sent them."

"The gent knows you, you bet, missy," replied the image. "He giv me a quarter and axed if I know'd my alphabet 'nuf to find letter 'B' an' tote dese yere to the prettiest young lady I'd ever seed. Most wite ladies dey looks all jes' alike to me, but you's different, missy, an' I reckon de tings must be fur you."

I had a horrible vision of this compliment proceeding from the Flash-light or the Evening Bat. "What was the gentleman like?" I asked.

"Like mos' any gent, missy, 'cept that he was powerful tall, an' I reckon if he keeps right on like he's doin' now he'll get mos' as brown as me some day."

Then I knew that I was safe in taking the present, so I did and gave the comical black image two or three little round white metal things I'd got from the purser when I changed some English money. I didn't know how much they were, and they looked ridiculously small, but he seemed pleased.

When he had run off I turned my attention to the peaches. They were so big that there was room only for four in the basket, and they seemed dreadfully pathetic considering from whom they had come.

That poor fellow must be almost penniless or he wouldn't have been in the steerage, yet he had bought peaches for me and given a "quarter"—what ever that was—to his quaint black doll of a messenger. I could have cried. Nevertheless I ate two of the peaches and reluctantly presented the other two, which I couldn't possibly eat, to a gloomy "B" child sitting on a shawl strap.

As if for a reward of virtue, just as I had disposed of my leavings and stuck the roses into my belt, the last of the luggage arrived. There were two custom house men near to choose from, and as I've heard, in choosing between two evils it's better to choose the less, I smiled beseechingly at the smaller man, who had just crammed a pile of lace blouses into the box of a lady with nervous prostration.

Whether he was sated with cruelty, or whether he was naturally of an angelic disposition, I shall probably never know now, but the fact remains that, instead of turning out the fiend I'd been led to expect, he was one of the most considerate men I've ever met. He wouldn't even let me unlock my own boxes, but took the keys and opened them for me himself. (Didn't an executioner braid the hair of some queen whose head he was going to chop off? I must look the incident up when I have time.) Anyway, I thought of it when the custom house man was being so polite, but the analogy didn't go any farther, for my head never came off at all, and two of the boxes remained unopened.

A little black image in the shape of a boy.

"You're English, aren't you?" he asked, and when I said yes, and that I was only on a short visit, he treated my belongings as if they were sacred. If he disturbed anything, he laid it back nicely, keeping up a running conversation as he went on. I told him that English women might bring home all the pretty clothes they liked from other countries, and that I considered it most ungallant in such a chivalrous nation as America to deny ladies a few Paris dresses.

"Do you happen to know, miss, what's the income tax in your country?" he asked, tenderly putting back some yellow hatpins which had fallen out of a box of mine.

"Dear me, no," I exclaimed. "But I think it's sometimes more than a shilling in the pound. I've heard my brother say so, and as for the death duties, it's more than your life's worth to die."

"A-ah," said the nice man. "We haven't got any income tax on this side, and folks can die in peace whenever they please. I guess that kind of evens things up, don't it?"

I didn't know what to answer, so I thanked him for his kindness, and we parted the best of friends.

Mrs. Ess Kay appeared so quickly afterward that it almost seemed as if she must have been lying in wait. She was looking pale and shattered, and Louise, following close behind, was positively haggard. Only Sally had weathered the storm without being outwardly the worse for wear, but even she didn't look as good natured as usual.

"How have you got along, you poor, deserted darling?" affectionately inquired Mrs. Ess Kay, undismayed by a fixed gaze from Sally, which apparently signified reproach.

"It wasn't very bad, and I've quite enjoyed myself," I replied, forgetting some tedious moments in the light of others not tedious and hoping that the roses in my belt might pass unnoticed.

Fortunately they did, otherwise I should have been in a difficulty, for I should have hated to vulgarize the little episode by putting it into story form for Mrs. Ess Kay, and presumably roses have not been taught to grow wild on the New York docks, although they say Americans are so very luxurious in their tastes one would hardly be surprised at anything.

A beautiful electric carriage, bigger than a brougham, was waiting for us, and we left Louise, with a butler or some other manservant out of livery, to wrestle with the luggage and bring it in cabs (which they called "backs") up to Mrs. Ess Kay's house in New York, where I knew she meant to stop for a few days before going on to Newport.

The minute we drove away from the docks I began to notice dozens of things which made me tremendously conscious that I was in a foreign country. One would think, as so many of these people were English, or, anyway, British, before they were Americans that their buildings and everything else would be enough like to remind one of home. But each street we turned into showed me that this isn't at all true in New York. There are bits like Paris—at least you think so on a superficial glance—but nothing in the faintest degree like London.

Something in the air, too, made me feel excited, as it does in Paris. Sparks of electricity snapped in my veins, and I had a presentiment of interesting things that must surely happen.

I've always been very sensitive to smells, which can make me joyful or miserable, just as music does. Vic says I oughtn't to tell people this, as it signifies I'm still in close touch with brute creation. But I don't much mind if I am, for so many animals are nicer than we are—dogs and horses, for instance; and then one has to acknowledge, whether one likes or not, that a monkey is a kind of poor relation. Each place I've ever visited has its own smell for me and even houses and people. I would know the smell of Battlemead Towers, if I were taken there by winding ways, with my eyes blindfolded. It's the smell of old oak and potpourri, and books and chintz, and autumn leaves and pine trees, mixed together. Mother smells like a tea rose and Vic like a wax doll. London has a rich, heavy scent, which makes you feel as if you had a great deal of money and wanted to spend it, but not in a hurry. The smell of Paris makes you want to laugh and clap your hands and go to the theater. The smell of Rome makes you feel as if you wished to be very beautiful and move to the slow accompaniment of a magnificent church organ, with the vox humana stop drawn out. But New York—the smell of New York! How shall I describe the sensation it gave me, as Mrs. Ess Kay's electric carriage smoothly spun me up town? The heavy feeling of homesickness which I had had on the ship for the last few days was gone, and instead I felt a wild sense of exhilaration, as if I'd come dashing home after a glorious run with the hounds and plunged into a cold bath with two bottles of eau de cologne poured into the water.

It was amazingly hot, but the breeze gave a hint of the sea, and every shop and house we passed seemed to keep spices stored away, for the breeze to blow over.

Even the old-fashioned houses, no higher than those in London, were as different from ours as possible, and it was extraordinary to see people—nicely dressed women and pretty girls—perched on the front steps under awnings without so much as a pocket handkerchief lawn between them and the street. Persons of that class at home would be far too shy to lounge about and be stared at not only by the neighbors, but by twenty strangers a minute, yet here they sat on rugs and read or did embroidery or swung back and forth in chairs that rocked like cradles, paying no more attention to the passers than if they had been flies.

By and by we came out of the quiet streets walled in with monotonous rows of red brick or brown stone houses into a scene of terror. It was a street, too, but what a street! I thought that I'd grown accustomed to motor-ing through traffic, for once Stan took me in his car all the way from Battlemead to Pall Mall, where he stood me a very jolly luncheon at the Carlton hotel, but that experience was nothing to this. I felt a little jumpy with Stan when we shot between omnibuses in a space which looked twice too narrow, and once when I thought a frightfully tall horse was going to bite off my hat, but I soon got used to it.

If I were driven every day of my life for a year through this terrible street in New York, though, I should be no more used to it on the last day than on the first. The only change in me at the end of that time would be in my hair, which would have turned snow white and be standing up permanently all over my head like Strumpel-Peter's, only worse.

London roars, a monotonous, cannon-balls-in-the-cellar roar, with just a light tinkle of hansom cabs sprinkled over the top of the solid sound, but that great straight street into which we suddenly flashed had no solid sound. It shrieked in short, sharp yells, made up of a dozen distinct noises, each one louder and more insistent than the other.

There were trams and tram bells and motors and carriages and over all an appalling thunder of trains rushing to and fro above our heads on lines roofing the entire street built upon iron stilts. Every minute they swooped by, running north and south, and I trembled lest they should leap their tracks and crush us into powder.

"It's only the elevated, deah," said Sally, pitying my agitation, "and it's never fallen down yet, so I don't believe it will today. You shall take a ride with me if Cousin Katherine will let you, which she probably won't. You can't think what fun it is shooting past the windows of the houses just like glancing into an exciting story book you know you'll never have a chance to finish. You do get a peep into tragedies and comedies some times."

"My goodness!" I exclaimed. "I'm thankful I don't have to live in one of those houses. It must be impossible ever to take a bath or to get engaged properly."

American Aeronauts Have Terrifying Experience.

FALL OF TWO THOUSAND FEET

When 4,000 Feet in the Air Their Balloon Burst and They Are Apparently Doomed to Be Dashed to Pieces. When the Rent Gas Bag Automatically Forms a Parachute and the Aeronauts Are Saved as by a Miracle—International Balloon Race at Berlin Attended by Thrilling Accident.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The international balloon race, which started Sunday from the suburb of Schmargendorf, was the occasion of a thrilling accident, two American aeronauts having a miraculous escape from death. The American balloon Conqueror, the only American-built craft in the contest, having on board A. Holland Forbes and Augustus Post, less than two minutes after the start, burst at an altitude of 4,000 feet.

For 2,000 feet it shot down like a bullet, and then the torn silk bag assumed the shape of a parachute, thus checking the rapidity of the descent. Coming close to the earth, however, the basket smashed into the roof of a house, but the two men escaped with but slight injuries.

The race, in which twenty-three balloons participated, representing Great Britain, France, Germany, the United States, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium and Spain, started at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the presence of at least 80,000 spectators. The sunshine was brilliant and the heat was that of summer. Amid the strains of "America" and volleys of cheers, the first balloon was sent away. It was the "America II," under command of James C. McCoy, who was accompanied by Lieutenant Voghmann. The balloon was decorated with the Stars and Stripes, and it sailed away to the southeast at a rapid pace, the aeronauts waving their hats.

A representative of each of the other nations followed the American balloon in succession at intervals of two minutes, the national hymn of the respective countries ringing forth as the ropes were cast loose.

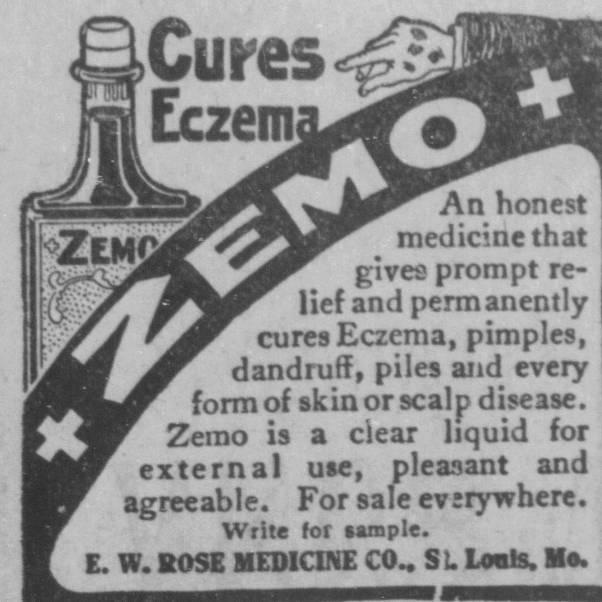

The second batch of eight balloons was led by Forbes in the Conqueror, which was started with some difficulty owing to a gusty wind and too much ballast. But eventually it shot up and reached a high altitude in an incredibly short period, the basket swaying violently. Then almost instantly a cry of horror arose from the crowd, who saw the silk collapse and shouted "The balloon is ripping up."

Thousands who had gathered there stood for a moment petrified. Some turned away fainting as they saw the balloon falling with lightning-like rapidity. At the same time showers of sand and appurtenances of the balloon shot downward with equal rapidity, and then daylight was seen through the envelope, great ragged edges of the silk showing on either side.

"They are killed," went in a hushed whisper through the crowd, but shortly the remainder of the envelope appeared to take first a triangular shape and then was transformed into a sort of parachute at the top of the net, and the progress of the wrecked balloon was considerably arrested.

It came down slower and slower, meantime being swept by the wind far to the southeast and finally disappeared from view behind a block of houses. The suspense among the crowd was terrible. But a few minutes later a telephone message was received from Friedenau which announced that the men had landed and had not been seriously injured. A great sigh of relief went up among the people, who threw their hats in the air for joy. The other balloons were sent up after a brief delay, without further accident.

Pains of women, head pains, or any pain stopped in 20 minutes sure, with Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. See full formula on 25c Box. Sold by F. B. Johnson & Co.

INDIANA POLITICS

ROBERT G. TUCKER.

Indianapolis, Oct. 12.—The itinerary of the speaking tour of W. H. Taft in Indiana has not been worked out as the Republican state headquarters Will H. Hays, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Republican state committee, said that all he knew about it was that Taft would be in Indiana on Oct. 22, 23 and 24, but that the places where he would speak had not been selected. Mr. Hays was shown a dispatch from Chicago which said that Taft would be taken out of Indiana late in the afternoon on Oct. 24 and that he would speak at Chicago that night. "He will not do anything of the kind," Hays said. "The national committee told me we were to have Taft for three days and I shall book him for speeches on three nights." I talked with national headquarters by telephone and also with Vorys at Cincinnati, and if there was any intention of changing the date to Chicago they surely would have told me about it. It would be too serious a matter with us for them to take Taft away from us for that night, and if they do it it will be over my protest."

William J. Bryan will be in Indiana on a special train trip one day, going to New York, and again for a full day, returning from New York. National Chairman Norman E. Mack of the Democratic national committee said that this had been decided on definitely. He will also have one day in Ohio, both going to and coming from the East, and an effort is to be made to get him pretty well over each state. The Indiana dates will probably be Oct. 19 and Oct. 30. These dates may be moved back one day. The schedule will be worked out in a day or two. Mr. Bryan is to have a meeting in Chicago the Saturday before election, and it depends largely on whether it is to be a big day affair or simply a big night meeting whether Indiana will get him either Friday or during daylight Saturday. The biggest of the Indiana meetings will be in Indianapolis. Mr. Kern will be in Indiana at the same time, and it is likely that the two nominees will appear together on at least one occasion, and that it will be the Democrats' star feature of the Indiana campaign.

A pledge has been signed by the Republican candidates for county offices in Marion county in favor of a law placing all county offices on a straight salary basis, and declaring that they will favor a law providing for the examination by experts of the books of all offices. This pledge was signed at a formal meeting of the candidates.

Managers of the Prohibition party are unusually busy obtaining speakers and dating them for the remainder of the campaign.

"BULLY," SAYS BEVERIDGE

Senator Thus Describes His Physical Condition.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 12.—United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge passed through here on the eastbound Overland Limited last night on his way to Salt Lake, where he is billed to speak on general issues of the campaign to night. He says he is in far better health now than he was when he opened the campaign, having been resting at the Tavern, Lake Tahoe, for the past few days.

Senator Beveridge was to have spoken here Saturday night, but had to abandon his intentions on account of a severe hoarseness and a slight nervous breakdown. Both of these, he says, have passed off and he describes himself as "bully." After Salt Lake he will talk at Pueblo, Col., on labor questions and then will tour the middle West in his private train, making as many as thirty speeches a day.

I was subject to attacks of kidney trouble for years, and despaired of ever getting relief. The kidney secretions were too frequent in action and were accompanied by pain in passage. Too Much of a Tease.

Blough and Neighbors were chatting on the porch. Mrs. Blough was in the parlor near the window. Blough knew she was listening and wanted to tease her.

"Had a little experience today," he said to Neighbors confidentially. "Prettiest little girl you ever saw. She was sauntering along the street some feet behind a strolling couple. I was walking faster, and as I caught up with her I couldn't help looking at her, she was so pretty. She caught my look and smiled. I had no intention of flirting, of course, but that smile was irresistible. Then our hands touched accidentally, and we let them linger a minute. She began walking faster to keep up with me, and we passed the couple ahead together. When we got some distance ahead of them I mustered up nerve enough to speak. 'Good-evening,' I said, and she replied the same very roguishly."

There was a swish of skirts in the parlor, and Blough turned in time to see his wife vanishing toward the hall.

"Thunder!" he exclaimed. "Of course the little girl was only about six years old, but my wife didn't wait to hear that. She's gone upstairs to cry now, and even if she accepts my explanation it means flowers and a party dress. What fools we husbands be?"—St. Louis Republic.

Sterne's Destitution.

Laurence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little time before his death, being in a state of destitution, he went one evening to borrow £5 from his friend Garrick. Upon arriving he heard music and knew that a party was going on. He heard the merry laughter and, gently replacing the uplifted knocker, retraced his steps.

We never feel our miseries so keenly as when contrasted with the joys of others, and it is only then that we realize Wordsworth's picture:

And homeless near a thousand homes I stood
And near a thousand tables pined for food.

Another story of this writer does not evoke so much sympathy. It was known that Sterne used his wife very ill, and in talking with Garrick one day in the sentimental style of conjugal love and fidelity he said, "The husband who behaves unkindly to his wife deserves to have his house burn down over his head."

"If you think so," said Garrick quietly, "I hope yours is well insured."

Political "Pome."

The fight is drawing to its close. The noise will soon be gone. There but remains the last appeal that's due from More Anon, a few brief words from You Know Who as friend speaks unto friend, Justitia throws a final fit, and then we have the end. A "Note of Warning" there may be from Old Subscriber's pen, and Constant Reader may emerge one moment from his den. Vox Populi may raise a wall that pierces heaven's vault, insisting that the time has come when we should call a halt, and One Who Knows may yet, perchance, his stormy voice uplift and ask of all the universe, "Ab, whither do we drift?" But all the fighting has been done. There is no longer strife. So let us cut out politics and lead the higher life.—Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

GETTING A GOOD START

The Cubs Now Have Two of Those Coveted Four Games.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Following their decisive victory at Detroit, Saturday the Chicago team of the National Baseball League, which is contesting the world's championship with the Detroit team of the American League, took the second game of the series on the local grounds Sunday. Chicago's score was 6 runs, 7 hits and 1 error; Detroit, 1 run, 4 hits and 1 error. Up to the eighth the game was a pitcher's battle with Overall and Donovan in the box with both sides for the most part going out one, two, three. It began to look as if the experience of last year's championship series, when the same pitchers worked, would be repeated namely, a tie game. There was comparatively little noise. The spectators were too highly keyed by the neck-and-neck struggle to indulge in much cheering. And besides, despite bright sunlight, the air was rather chilly which also had a subduing effect.

To Joe Tinker belongs the credit for breaking the spell which Donovan had held over the Chicagoans for so long. Steinfeldt had struck out, and Hofmar had reached first because Schaefer after a beautiful one-handed pick-up of his weak grounder, had thrown low. The crowd scarcely hoped for more than a single, and hardly expected that when Tinker came to bat, Donovan sent a fast waist-high inshoot over the plate, that is to say, partly over it. It never got all the way, for the stocky Chicago shortstop, who had already popularized himself by fast, clean fielding, swung viciously. The ball soared high, so high that it seemed certain it must drop into Cobb's hands, as that fielder was playing well back as a result of previous experiences with Tinker. But there was an unusual amount of energy behind the hit, and it sailed high and clear into the stand in right field. Tinker, preceded by Hofman trotted around the circuit amidst the first real cheering of the game. Horns were blown, bells rung and throats strained to increase the ovation. Manager Jennings sought to persuade Umpire Kelm that the hit should go for only two bases, but Kelm only smiled. Such have always gone for home runs. The ground rules provided that hits into the overflow crowd should restrict the runner to two bases, but this certainly had nothing to do with that tremendous wallop of Tinker's. The application of the rule was illustrated by the next man at bat, "Noisy" John Kling. Kling drove the first ball pitched into the overflow crowd in left field and stopped running when he had reached second base. This onslaught had affected Donovan, but he still smiled and retired Overall on a weak grounder. He went to pieces, however, when Sheppard, the next batsman, singled over second and scored Kling. The whole team, in fact, seemed to be stunned by the suddenness of it all. Sheppard made a desperate steal of second and went to third on Evers's safe punt. Rossman, in a moment of absent-mindedness brought about by the general catastrophe, which had happened to Detroit's aspirations, allowed Evers to flash away from first and reach second standing up while the ball remained in the first baseman's hands. Schulte tripled to deep left center, scoring Sheppard and Evers. Then, to finish matters up, Donovan threw a wild pitch and Schulte trotted across the plate with Chicago's sixth and last run. Chance walked and stole second while Schmidt was musing over the ball on Detroit's sudden fall in fortune, but Steinfeldt flew out, retiring the side.

Detroit substituted D. Jones for O'Leary for a final try for victory, and the sub was given his base on balls. He went to second on Crawford's out and scored when Cobb singled to center. Rossman, however, hit into a double play, and the game was over.

The attendance, due largely to the chill weather, was only 17,760 paid admissions, according to official figures made public after the game. The gross receipts were $26,927.

They Had Been Drinking.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Noted for having attempted to avenge the death of President Garfield by shooting at Gulteau, the assassin, William Jones, locally known as "Bill Jones the Avenger," a farmer, last night shot and killed John A. McPherson of Detroit, Mich., at Bate's farm, near Brookland, on the outskirts of this city. Jones was arrested and claims that he acted in self-defense. The two men had been drinking, it is said.

Still a Mystery.

Wadsworth, Ohio, Oct. 12.—No progress has been made by the authorities in solving the mystery surrounding the death of Orle Lee, the factory girl, whose body was found along a country road near here last Thursday morning. Guy Rasor, the girl's sweetheart, is under arrest on the charge of murder.
